

Wow. It would be a horrible shame to lose XM traffic. It has saved me hours and gallons of fuel. Although they local station claims to offer traffic and weather (on the 8's / 2's / 5's, whatever), you end up with little info or the fact that no report is available due sports programming or "holler at the mayor" (no kidding; our mayor sits in on a station for a program called "holla at the mayor" where he answers questions. Point is, I don't think the locals are providing the service at all, XM is, and it's made my life better.
